Around Thanksgiving, My local church hosted a brown bag ministry event where you would fill bags with food to give to those who were less fortunate in the spirit of giving.

- Unlike previous instances of being compelled by parents or teachers, this was among the initial events in my life that I eagerly volunteered for. It underlined the importance of seizing opportunities, especially those that allow us to assist those in need, emphasizing the value of actively participating in such endeavors.

- Through my involvement with the Miracle League, I learned the value of patience, realizing that the focus didn't always have to be on winning or hitting home runs; instead, it emphasized the importance of having fun and cherishing the moments spent with others.
